About the project...

The project Integrating civil society generational perspectives in combating all forms of discrimination against women and girls, aims at breaking down stereotypes by targeting respectively childhood, adolescence and adulthood through an intergenerational approach.

In particular, it is acting on:

- structuring a dialogue with children of Elementary schools of Stolac and Berkovići on women's role, by stimulating their reflections and thoughts through drawings and storytelling;
- structuring a dialogue with youngster of Secondary schools of Stolac and Berkovići municipalities by stimulating their critical reflection and by favouring their proactive participation in society through video-documentaries activities;

- structuring an effective dialogue with stakeholders for the sustainability of project's proposals and taking a first step towards gender policies;

OUR FIRST MEETING IN STOLAC

Stolac, Bosnia and Herzegovina, 19.12.2013

The partner staff of Ugorhideja and Tamat meet the first time in Stolac !
We shared project objectives, aims and we planned together our next steps!

THE DRAWING DAYS

From March to April 2013 we have organized drawing days workshops with over 250 children, in 3 elementary schools; Prva Osnovna škola Stolac, Osnovna škola Stolac and Osnovna škola Njegos, in Berkovići, in all grades (1st grade –9th grade) .

At the beginning of each workshop the topics of violence, discrimination, gender have been introduced by a gender expert in order to motivate children and get them involved in the drawings activity attended by the project staff and teachers:

After this workshops of preparation, children have been let free to draw and to express their feelings and their imagination trough papers and colours.

Materials used have been white and colour paper, crayons and tempera and children used the free technique of drawing on the theme of women's rights against all forms of discrimination against women and girls.

Children have been let free to talk and discuss while drawing, asking specific questions and providing answers to questions made by the project staff.
